Corvo's new earbuds took 5.0 share points at their two launch retailers; Ridgeline gave up 2.3 of them

Prepared for the Ridgeline brand team · Your agency · Nov 10, 2026 · Wireless earbuds, unit share, Sep 5–Oct 31, 2026

THE ANSWER

- Corvo's unit share rose 5.2 points at Corner Electronics and 4.8 points at Sound Depot in the four weeks after its Oct 3 launch.[1]
- Ridgeline lost 2.4 and 2.1 points there, about half of what Corvo gained.[1]
- At the two retailers without the product, shares moved less than 1 point, so the launch is the likely cause.[1]

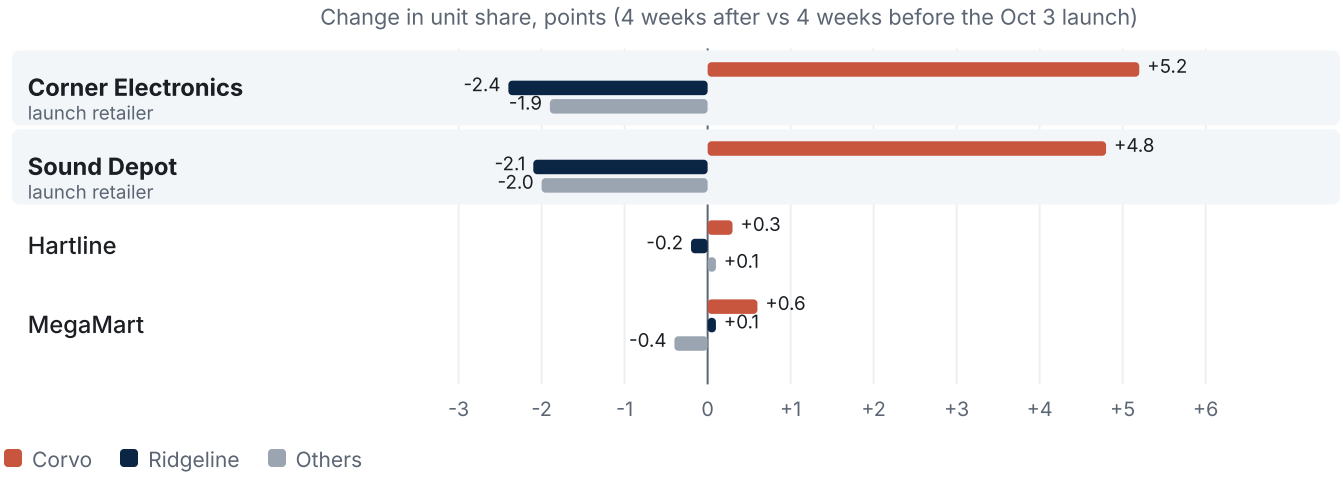

THE ASK

Decide by Nov 20 whether Ridgeline answers at the two launch retailers before holiday: a promotion on Pulse 2, or a request for endcap space.

WHAT THE DATA SHOWS

1. The launch moved share where it shipped[1] — HIGH
   Same weeks, same panel; the retailers without it barely moved.

2. Ridgeline paid about half the cost[1] — HIGH
   The rest came from smaller brands, spread thin.

3. Corvo is cheaper on the shelf[2] — MEDIUM
   Store visits saw Corvo at $79 against Pulse 2 at $99, but only in four stores.

4. Launch-week displays may be doing the work[2,3] — LOW
   One field note mentions an endcap; we couldn't confirm it anywhere else.

WHAT WE'RE WATCHING

- Whether Corvo's gain holds after launch week
- Corvo's holiday price at both retailers

WHAT WE'RE NOT SURE ABOUT

- The panel has no online sales.
- Four weeks is early for a launch.
- Prices come from four store visits, not every store.
